Elf doors: the latest Christmas trend

Bente can hardly wait to travel to the other side of the secret elf door! Now that he's a fully qualified Christmas elf, he can finally help make the season merry and bright. His first client is Nelia: he makes himself comfortable in her bedroom, and surprises her with letters and little handmade presents. Bente loves being an elf, even when things sometimes don't go to plan. Nelia and he become great friends – but the first and most important law of elfdom is that they must never see each other. Then Bente's little sister Milly disappears in the woods, and he urgently needs Nelia's help!

- Part of the new 'elf door' trend
- Includes brilliant crafting ideas and recipes
- An enchanting story about two very special friends
- A luxurious book with richly detailed illustrations, lovingly and wittily written

Flitter & Flutter and the ghost exam

Little ghosts Flitter and Flutter are worried. Aunt Twister is really mean and really old-fashioned, and now she wants to test the siblings' haunting skills. But haunting is boring! And dangerous too. But what can they do? If they fail the test, they'll have to spend the summer with Aunt Twister, so that she can turn them into 'real ghosts'. Luckily, they discover a monster in the attic which embodies everything ghosts are most scared of: order, cleanliness and powerful suction. Can the monster help them get rid of nasty Aunt Twister?

- Creepy-comic ghost story about two smart siblings who don't like haunting
- Perfect for Halloween
- Richly illustrated – helps ease the transition to independent reading

The new book by the bestselling author of Shake the Apple Tree

Christmas is coming! The little fir tree can't wait to be decorated by the forest residents. But its branches are still so full of snow! The squirrels are about to have a sled race and are eagerly awaiting the start signal. And the baby bunnies have built a snow bunny, but the wind has blown all its clothes off. Where could they be?

An interactive book for kids aged 2+: depending on what is happening in the story, they can shake the book, blow on it, put their hands up in the air, and more.

Packed with surprises, this book promises a whole lot of fun and excitement, perfect for the most wonderful season of all.

The friends from Dragon Island explore the polar regions

Coconut, Matilda and Oskar have come to visit their polar bear pal. When Björn tells them that his ice floe keeps getting smaller and smaller, they decide to help their friend. The three embark on a voyage of exploration, asking lots of questions: will the polar ice caps last for ever? Who lives in the Arctic, and who lives in the Antarctic? How have the regions changed since humans first explored them? What causes climate change, and how does it affect the animals and plants who live at the poles? And what do we have to do, if we want to save Björn's habitat? – Coconut, Matilda and Oskar have written down everything they learnt during their trip, so that Coconut fans can read all about it!

- Will the ice caps last forever? Coconut, Oskar and Matilda explore the polar regions

The magically illustrated book for children on the EFT tapping technique

The emotional world of children is vast – some days they are just fine and then there are days when everything feels difficult, their tummies are doing tumbles, and there’s a big lump in their throat. In a fun, child-friendly way, this book shows how through EFT (Emotional Freedom Technique) children can become more aware of their feelings and better able to handle painful emotions and challenging situations.

This is where the magic points come into play, which we can activate so that energy can start flowing again where something was blocking it. This method improves our own body awareness and can be used in dealing with stressful feelings such as fear, sadness, and shame, and with problems falling asleep.

- How children learn to deal with difficult emotions in a simple, step-by-step way using the EFT tapping technique
- Enchantingly illustrated by Stella Eich
- A method successfully applied and developed over years in psychological counseling of children

Waiting for Christmas can be so much fun!

The animals who live in the big oak tree in the wood are beside themselves with anticipation. It'll be Christmas soon! But there's still so much to do: Bibi the bunny wants to craft paper stars and garlands, Bobo the badger is searching for the perfect tree, Harry the hedgehog is taking care of the lights, Stevie the squirrel is baking delicious gingerbread, and Ollie the owl is in charge of the Christmas carols.

They're just missing a few things... can you help find them?

The fun rhymes will encourage young readers to help search for the missing objects, so that the animals can have a wonderful Christmas party at the end!

- Entertaining, seasonal search & find activities make this the perfect advent present
- Lovingly detailed, heartwarming and modern illustrations by Rebecca Mönch
- Will motivate young readers to play and discover

How do I say no?

What a stupid day! Luca is really annoyed with himself. All he wanted to do was play quietly in the sandbox, but then Mama's friend gave him a big kiss on the cheek, an older girl pushed him aside at the water fountain, and his friend Mia persuaded him to go to the bakery all on his own.

Why did all this happen, when his tummy clearly told him that it wasn't right? Luckily, Eddy the meerkat is there to help. He's Luca's favourite teddy bear, and the world's best 'no'-sayer. Eddy explains to Luca that, in future, he can avoid things like that by following the 'Being Brave is Good for Me' method, with its three easy steps. Saying no is easy when you listen to your tummy!

- With meerkat teddy Eddy's help, young Luca learns to say no in three easy steps
- Learning to say no is an important tool to prevent discomfort and harm
- Child-friendly and grounded in pedagogic theory

Mondays in the savannah

Pippa the aardvark likes her life. She and her friends Horst the oxpecker, Manolo the lion, the three meercats and bird lady Gisela live by a beautiful watering hole – with its glittering waves, sandy shore and shady trees. Monday is the highlight of their week, when the safari jeeps show up and the animals perform their well-rehearsed theatre programme. Pippa would like things to stay exactly the way they are for ever. But then the humans decide to build bungalows on the edge of the watering hole. The friends must stop them, no matter what! They decide to ask the famous oracle for advice. But does the oracle actually exist? And what does it look like? Together, the animals set out on an adventurous journey across the savannah.

- 'Wild Weeks' is a new series for young children – there's an exciting adventure for every day of the week
- With charming animal characters, fast-paced adventure and lots of witty wordplay

The Christmas classic retold for young readers

Miserly old Ebenezer Scrooge doesn’t think much of Christmas, and has no sympathy for his fellow man. But then his late partner Marley announces that three ghosts will visit Scrooge on Christmas Eve. The ghosts take him on a journey into Christmases past, present and future, and he slowly comes to understand the true meaning of the season – and of life. Fortunately, it isn’t too late for him to change...

- Dickens’s classic tale lovingly retold for readers aged 7+
- Divided into several short chapters
- Perfect for improving readers
- Beautiful colour illustrations throughout, by Maria Braner

Presto-chango-disappear-o! A new case for the special agents of the magic lost property office

Ever since shy Anton took on the job of special agent, exciting times have almost started to feel normal. But then magician Ms Zampana comes to town and causes chaos: Pogo is stolen from the lost property office only to reappear at the zoo at the same time as baby hippo Juma vanishes from her enclosure. Anton's classmate Leo feels terrible: his parents own the zoo, and Juma was their biggest attraction. Anton and Alex pull out all the stops to find the baby hippo, but Pogo's predictions sound crazier than ever, and even the rocket bed starts playing up... The case seems to be cursed, and there are lots of surprises in store for these special agents! Adventurous, exciting and funny, this is the brilliant, vividly written second tale about the flying lost property office for treasured objects – with colour illustrations throughout

Get ready for another marvellous Muscleteer adventure

Oh no, it's Friday 13th! Picandou is a superstitious mouse, and knows only too well that today's an unlucky day. And then things start to go wrong in the Muscleteers' cosy cave in the basement of Mrs Merry's Delicatessen: poor Bertram the hamster hits his head and now he thinks he's someone else, and then Pomme de Terre tries to help him and disappears without a trace... Can Gruyère and Picandou stop this unlucky chain of mishaps and misadventures, and save their friends? Surely they can – but they'll need an extra-large dose of good luck...

Ute Krause's bestselling and wonderfully warmhearted series is packed with opulent illustrations, and perfect for story-time as well as independent reading. The brave little Muscleteers champion friendship, feelings and fraternity – big topics for young heroes!

- A big new adventure in our popular Muscleteers series, a real classic for our times

For Ella Löwenstein, magic smells like dancing snowflakes. And that's not all: because she's a fairy whisperer, she can actually see magical beings! And the creatures of Otherworld need her help...

It's so silly: the moment Oberon, King of Magical Beings, leaves for his annual tour, Otherworld is in chaos. Now that he's gone, the fairies have seized the opportunity and are playing lots of pranks on humans. Ella has her hands full trying to get things under control. Unfortunately, goblin Kasimir is being no help at all for a change. He has chosen this, of all times, to start a row with the fairies. Before she knows it, Ella is hit by a spell – and she, Kasimir and their friend Milo are reduced to the size of fairies. Now Titania, the legendary Queen of the Fairies, is their only hope...

A very special inclusive road trip: great fun, and told with sensitivity and a light touch

When a flip-flop hits Carl on the head as he sits by the Baltic in his ugly beach wheelchair, his life changes overnight. Carl is spending the summer holidays with his mother – but he'd much rather be at the summer camp for wheelchair skaters. The flip-flop belongs to Fee, who's the same age as Carl, and soon Fee is whirling through Carl's life like a typhoon, hurricane and tornado all at the same time. When she learns that Carl's relationship with his dad has been strained since the accident, she persuades him to visit his dad in Berlin – after all, it's only 200 miles away.

During their road trip, though, Carl finds out that Fee has an ulterior motive for the journey: she wants to meet the former German chancellor – and Carl's dad knows her, because he used to be her chauffeur. But by the time Carl realises, they're already halfway to the German capital...

‘Once, he found me when I was lost – now I must find him, no matter what’

Malu can't wait to leave: leave home, leave Germany, leave her old life. So when she gets a chance to take part in a Japanese exchange programme, she signs up for it. Malu thinks she's ready for Tokyo, but it's a culture shock, and the city makes her feel dizzy – as does Kentaro, her new classmate. Slowly, Malu lets him in, and when Kentaro introduces her to his own special Tokyo, she discovers a side to herself she never knew existed. The two slowly start falling for each other, as they go on romantic walks through the rain-soaked, neon-lit streets, enjoy crazy karaoke sessions and experience magical moments on Tokyo's moonlit rooftops. But then disaster hits the city – and Malu desperately tries to find the love of her life amongst the devastation...

Yasmin Shakarami (b. Munich, 1991) is half-Hungarian and half-Iranian. In 2010, she went to live in Tokyo for a while, and subsequently studied Philosophy and Ethics in Munich. After graduating with an MA, she founded a school for German language, literature and philosophy in Vancouver. She now lives in Munich again, and is the winner of the city's 2021 Literature Scholarship. Her debut novel, "Tokyo Rain", was an instant bestseller and has already been translated into several languages.

- Winner of the 2024 Delia Prize for YA Romance and longlisted for the 2025 Ulla Hahn YA Prize
- Rights already sold into seven territories (Italy, Spain, France, Russia, Lithuania, Ukraine and Slovakia)
- A bestselling novel by a debut author
- Tokyo makes for a very special and atmospheric setting
- 'Shakarami's writing is fast-paced, inventive and entertaining, and deeply moving at the same time' Antje Babendererde (YA author)
